The Changing Face of Aging in America - Finding the Right Solutions and Changing the Conversation

Sponsored by:

Discover lessons gleaned from the AARP Foundation’s current initiatives. What do older adults want? How can we create new solutions that work for all of us at any age? How can senior centers and nutrition programs position themselves for the future? Join this thought-provoking presentation and discussion to align your organization with current trends, as we all change the conversation.
For some Americans, aging is a decidedly negative process. They see growing older as a time of declining health, increased dependency, and generally being out of touch with today’s fast-paced society. But anyone who works with older adults has a very different view. We see aging as a normal process during which older adults can remain healthy, independent, connected, and productive. Two years ago, NCOA and seven other national aging organizations set out to understand how we can bridge this gap. With the help of the FrameWorks Institute, we researched the best way to “reframe” the story of aging. FrameWorks’ extensive research outlines the challenges we face in shifting people’s perceptions on aging. Learn more from ReFraming Aging trainers Tracey Colagrossi and Lynn Fields Harris—then join in a plenary discussion with James Firman and Bob Blancato as they discuss how you can change the story in your community.

Elizabeth White, Advocate, Consultant
Author of Fifty-Five, Unemployed and Faking Normal

At 60 years of age, White found herself in dire financial straits. You wouldn't have guessed by looking at her, but as she approached the traditional age for retirement, the Harvard graduate was severely underemployed and unable to afford even basic necessities. White chronicled her story in her new book, Fifty-Five, Unemployed and Faking Normal, which has since become a popular TEDx Talk. One of White's key ideas for surviving income instability is “resilience circles” of friends who can serve as support and refuge in vulnerable times. Since writing her book, White has become an advocate for victims of America’s retirement income-security crisis, working as a consultant and speaker to advocate for those who find themselves in situations like hers.

Diversity Matters: The Role of Aging Organizations in Bridging Cultural Divides

Americans of all ages are increasingly diverse, racially and ethnically. According to the Population Reference Bureau, over the next 40 years, the share of non-Hispanic white older adults will drop from 78% to 54%. Senior centers and community-based aging services organizations, including nutrition service providers, can play a critical role in bridging racial divides in their community by welcoming older adults of all backgrounds—and by serving as a catalyst to educate and increase understanding across cultures. This session will provide an overview of the demographic shifts in the aging population and will present tools and resources to help organizations meet the changing population we serve.

Senior Nutrition Program Evaluation: What You Should Know and Why You Should Care

Laying the framework to properly evaluate program efforts is a key part of planning. Evaluation findings can help you learn what works, improve your program, and demonstrate your success to funders, clients, and community partners. This presentation highlights best practices in assessing trends, barriers, and best practices in senior nutrition programs with the ultimate goal of increasing participation and improving client satisfaction. The presentation focuses on how best to assess key performance indicators, and provides tips on how to successfully measure impacts through evaluative tools such as scorecards and dashboards.

Screening and Intervening: Addressing Food Insecurity Among Seniors

Research shows that food insecurity — even marginal food security — is detrimental to health and well-being of seniors. Research also demonstrates the critical role of the Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program (SNAP) and senior nutrition programs in improving nutrition and health for older adults. Despite the severity of these effects, 5.2 million eligible adults age 60+ do not participate in SNAP, our nation's most effective and widest-reaching anti-hunger program. Eligible seniors are not participating in the program because they face significant barriers to access: isolation, lack of transportation, stigma, a complex application process, and misinformation about the program. Learn how to identify food insecurity, connect vulnerable seniors to the federal nutrition programs, including SNAP, how to fight against threats to these programs, and ways to facilitate community partnerships.

Advocacy: Successes, Struggles, and How to Speak Out For (and with) Seniors

Nutrition services providers, senior centers, and other community-based organizations that work directly with older adults and their caregivers have a unique role to play to ensure policymakers understand the perspectives and needs of the seniors they represent. NANASP and NCOA collaborated on a survey this spring of our memberships to learn more about your understanding of advocacy, the activities you’re engaging in to give voice to seniors, and the obstacles you’re facing. This workshop will share the key themes revealed by the survey, highlight lessons learned by local centers and providers, and explain the importance of advocacy in upcoming policy debates affecting the services and benefits seniors rely on.

Providing Genuine Volunteer Appreciation Without Breaking the Bank!

Volunteers are a vital resource for non-profit organizations and they must feel that their efforts are appreciated and their time given to an organization worthwhile. On-going and genuine heartfelt appreciation is the best way to retain and expand your volunteer teams but doing so does not have to break your budget. Staff, clients, and other community organizations can participate in providing thoughtful tokens of appreciation throughout the year that will keep volunteers energized and appreciated.

Hidden at Home: Uncovering and Addressing the Needs of Home Delivered Meal Clients through Care Management

Come and learn about the program that one public agency implemented in the NCQA LTSS certification process. In delivering care management to one of its most at-risk populations, its Home Delivered Meal clients, valuable lessons were learned about how the social determinants of health truly impact those they serve. These clients, while some of the most fragile they encountered, were also the richest in lessons provided.

Rethinking Economic Security and the Role of Senior Centers

Economic insecurity has the potential to be one of the defining characteristics of the upcoming generation of seniors. Nationally, more than 25 million older adults are economically insecure. With limited income, many low-income seniors struggle to pay for out-of-pocket medical expenses, utility bills, food, housing, and transportation. For many, the unpaid bills mount placing them in a position to be one “bad break” away from facing significant financial hardship. Older persons at risk have to go to many different offices, fill out multiple application forms, and subject themselves to various intake and assessment processes. In this workshop, participants will learn about resources and tools from NCOA’s Center fro Benefits Access to assist your members in the benefits application process; how 3 local senior centers in Texas are replicating a successful national model to expand the role and the impact of senior center services in assisting seniors who are struggling; and how Banner Olive Branch Senior Center’s Benefit Enrollment Center helps seniors improve their economic security. Find out how senior centers can work with their larger community to reorganize income assistance programs into a holistic model.

Fostering Strategic Partnerships to Support Evidence-Based Program
CRYSTAL F

The Administration for Community Living/Administration on Aging has provided funding to state and community-based organizations across the country to implement evidence-based programs focused on chronic disease self-management education (CDSME), falls prevention, physical activity, behavioral health, and more. This session will highlight the successful practices of an innovative senior center in South Carolina and a collaborative area agency on aging in Maine to form partnerships to implement and sustain evidence-based programs. Best practices, lessons learned, and challenges related to developing partnerships with local, state, and health care organizations will be discussed. Materials developed by the National Council on Aging’s National CDSME and Falls Prevention Resource Centers to support organizations in implementing, expanding, and sustaining these programs will be highlighted.

Meals in Motion Food Truck
Crystal F

A food truck that will benefit the Senior Nutrition Program and the community, by providing meals to under served seniors, enhancing Senior Center events, raising funds for Meals on Wheels and providing job training and placement opportunities for the unemployed. The Meals in Motion Food Truck is an innovative solution to providing Title III meals to under served seniors in senior housing and senior centers not currently providing Title III meals. The Food Truck is also available to senior centers to enhance a special events by providing theme meals and other special menu options. Food Truck bookings at private events such as community festivals and events, breweries, and concerts will directly benefit Meals on Wheels, raising funds to expand the program's capacity. A collaboration between the Title V Program and the Department of Labor will allow the Food Truck to be a training opportunity for those who have an interest in working in the food service industry or are interested in owning their own food truck. The curriculum will include food service training, business and banking classes, truck development, retail training and mentoring by fellow food truck owners. The truck will enable the Senior Nutrition Program to expand menu options by providing breakfast lunch or dinner while providing choice within those options. Meals provided at senior housing building will be scheduled with speakers in the community rooms to encourage socialization.

Supporting Access for Older Adults to Arthritis-Appropriate Evidence-Based Interventions in Local Communities

Osteoarthritis (OA), the most common form of arthritis, is a leading cause of disability in the U.S. Currently, more than 30 million adults have OA. This number is increasing dramatically, owing to two important OA risk factors: the aging of Baby Boomers and the obesity epidemic. Senior Centers can make significant contributions to addressing this health crisis, by implementing arthritis-appropriate evidence-based interventions, which have been shown to improve the lives of those with arthritis.
